JUDY TENUTA: Bio In Brief

Judy Tenuta is the most famous person who has ever lived...and if you don't believe it, just ask her. Judy is a triple threat in the sense that she has strong stage, television, comedy and film credits with a large fan base. She has appeared in" The Vagina Monologues," "Menopause the Musical" both in LA and Chicago, and she's had her own stand-up specials on Showtime, HBO and Lifetime. Judy was the first female stand-up comic to win "Best Female Comedian" at the American Comedy Awards and is a two-time Grammy nominee for her comedy CDs. The self-described "Love Goddess" and "Aphrodite of the Accordion" now offers her own unique take on life in a new book entitled "Full Frontal Tenudity." A collection of recipes for food, friends and fun! A kind of "chicken soup for your crotch," declares Judy. Judy divulges her deepest secrets, helpful tips, and poignant stories. Judy says, "You will be transformed from your pupa/larva stage of loneliness, into a great goddess gourmet of ganja. You will spread your wings and be a knoshing nymph, not just in the kitchen, but in every room of your trailer, and maybe even in a Walmart produce section."

Some of Judy's roles include: an ex-show girl turned wedding chaplain on General Hospital, a snobby judge on "Corey in the House" and a featured role in the teen comedy hit, "Material Girls", starring Hillary and Haley Duff and directed by Martha Coolidge. Judy also produced and starred in her own film, "Desperation Boulevard" about a former child star who stops at nothing to make a comeback. Judy costars with Bruce Vilanch in the Indie film, "Sister Mary." Judy has just completed 2 Independent flims: Playing Zania, a menacing, aging actress in "Going Down in LALA Land". Judy just completed the role of an overly zealous, in your face Mother of the star high school pitcher, in the soon to be released, "Gibsonberg", based on a true story.... so watch out, Meryl Streep!
